Spring Visiting Day Is March 26th at Experiment Farm

Demonstration in Pruning, Spraying and Setting Fruit Trees

PUBLIC INSPECTION

J. E. Stanford, Southern Agriculturist, to Be the Guest Speaker

The University of Arkansas College of Agriculture Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station will hold its annual spring visiting day Friday, March 26, states G. W. Ware, assistant director, in charge.

A timely and valuable program has been arranged for men, women, and students, including demonstrations in pruning, spraying, and setting of various fruit; home gardens, landscape gardening and home improvements, legumes, pastures, and winter cover crops; and terracing, soil preparation, and planting of various crops.

One of the features of the morning program will be an inspection of the Station's buildings and equipment, and the 180-acre farm, including more than 2,000 experimental plots with varieties, fertilizers, and cultural practices of the leading fruit, truck, and field crops of the state.

The short speaking program, beginning at 1:30 p. m., includes addresses by J. E. Stanford, editor of the Southern Agriculturist, and outstanding farm lecturers: Don T. Gray, dean and director; Miss Connie J. Bonshagel, state home demonstration agent, both of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Leading farm and home specialists of Arkansas will be on hand to discuss timely practices.

The experiments at the station reveal many valuable practices which will aid farmers in adjusting their farming system under the 1937 agricultural conservation program.

Luncheon will be served on the grounds at a reasonable charge to those who do not wish to bring their own. The public is invited to attend.

Baptists to Press Church Attendance

"March to Church in March" Is Slogan of City-Wide Movement

Sunday marked the beginning of the "March to Church in March" movement of First Baptist church during which an effort is being made to enlist the attendance of the people of the city in some church and Sunday school service. In speaking of the movement Monday, the Rev. William R. Hamilton, pastor of the Baptist church, said:

"This is not a campaign or a 'drive' which we are launching, but a movement for a steady increase, Sunday by Sunday, in the attendance at all church services. It is our desire that impetus may be given to efforts of all the churches in this work."

While the movement was being planned during the month of February, there was a great increase in the attendance. The average Sunday school attendance for that month was 316, a large gain over previous months. The church services enjoyed a similar gain. Last Sunday, the first Sunday of the movement proper, the officers and leaders of the church were encouraged by an attendance still larger than the February average despite the fact that the day started out with clouds and threatened rain.

This movement, said the pastor, is being directed and carried forward under the leadership of Arthur C. Erwin, Sunday school superintendent. Dr. W. R. Alexander, associate superintendent, L. F. Higginson, Mrs. Gus Haynes, Mrs. Hugh Smith, Mrs. J. E. Sandlin, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Miss Jean Laseter, Mrs. E. W. Dosselt, Mrs. M. S. Bates, Mrs. Joe Coleman, and Mrs. Harry Shiver.

The pastor emphasized Monday the fact that this movement is being launched not primarily to benefit the church, but with the aim that the ministries and services of the church may be extended to as many people in the community as possible.

Presbyterian Men to Dine Tuesday Night
The men of First Presbyterian church will hold their monthly supper at 7:15 p. m. Tuesday at the church. All are urged to attend. Reports of the nominating committee will be received and new officers will be elected.

A THOUGHT

As Gunner Died in Movie 'War'

A moment of real tragedy, in a synthetic movie war, is depicted in this remarkable picture, which revealed to a coroner's jury in Los Angeles how George Daley, war veteran and film extra, died as he was taking part in a battle for one of the sequences of a new picture. As a shell exploded, at left, with a terrific blast outside a "wrecked French farmhouse," Daley (indicated by arrow), who had been operating a machine gun, slumped to the floor. His death was believed due to heart failure, brought about by the heavy concussion.

Judge Rider and H. H. Huskey Speak

Judge Reviews County Finances—Huskey Outlines Farm Bureau

Problems of the county government, and the aims of the Hempstead county farm bureau, were discussed before the Hope Kiwanis club Tuesday noon by County Judge Frank Rider, and H. H. Huskey of near Elvins. Mr. Huskey is president of the Hempstead farm group and one of five committee-men of the state conservation board.

"The problems of county government are many and various with each department of the government having its own problems," County Judge Rider declared in his opening address. "I have found out in the last 60 days there are more problems facing the Hempstead county government than I would have time to relate at this meeting. There are constant demands on the treasurer."

"One of the county judge's first duties is to protect finances. One of our biggest problems is the demands for money for construction of bridges and roads."

"Outstanding road warrants today total approximately $24,000. I am not blaming this debt on any of the past administrations. If a road warrant is issued at present that warrant will not be good for nearly two and a half years."

"Most of the outstanding road warrants at present are for payments on road machinery. The road construction problem is brought about by not having enough money to build roads."

"Other problems of operating our county government are caused by exceeding our budget appropriations. For instance, last year the quorum court appropriated $6,000 for holding circuit court. The actual cost was near $10,000."

"A county judge is almost helpless in holding down court costs. If he does not allow the claims the circuit judge has authority to do so."

"I believe the remedy for our financial problems is closer cooperation among all officials and the promotion of education among our citizens," Judge Rider concluded.

H. H. Huskey, president of the Hempstead County Farm Bureau and a farmer "because I want to be," was the second guest speaker.

He outlined a five-point program which he said was some of the aims of the farm bureau in Hempstead county.

He named rural electrification, greater study and need for vocational agricultural teachers, a conservation program, development of dairy and beef cattle in Hempstead, and advocated the holding of a county fair each year.

He pleaded for closer co-operation among farmers and residents of the city in putting this program over.

Speaking on rural electrification, he said:

"I have electric lights in my home and I enjoy the bright lights as much as any of you city folks. Electricity is something that every farm home needs."

"As to vocational agriculture, we need Smith-Hughes teachers to pro-

Real Scarcity of Skilled Workers

Experienced Persons Needed in Many Lines of Local Business

Times are evidently getting better, if the scarcity of skilled workers is an indication of returning prosperity. This opinion was expressed by G. T. Cross, manager of the Hope district of the U. S. Employment Service, which has orders for skilled persons in several classes of jobs that have not been filled due to the lack of available applicants.

Experienced persons are needed now for the following openings: Machinists, welders, mechanic, salesladies, housekeepers, sausage-maker, automobile salesman, assistant manager, buyer for dry goods store, log cutters, and farm hands.

The Hope office of the Employment Service serves nine counties in southwest Arkansas and through affiliation with the other district offices and state headquarters gives the skilled applicants in this territory a chance at openings in other sections of the state, as well as local jobs.

It should be understood, Mr. Cross points out, that the Employment Service is not a relief agency, but it is

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usages by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Is it necessary for a man to remove his hat in the elevator of an office building?
2. Should a man alight from a vehicle before or after the woman whom he is accompanying?
3. Is it preferable to say, "Excuse me" or "Pardon me" when walking in front of another?
4. May a man keep a cigarette in his mouth when he tips his hat?
5. If a man is with a girl who speaks to someone whom he does not know, should he tip his hat?

What would you do if:
a) You were walking with a friend who stops to talk to a stranger?
b) Stop with him and wait for an introduction?
c) Walk on slowly and wait for your friend to join you?
d) Say "Goodbye, I'll go on?"

Answers:
1. No, but most women appreciate it.
2. Before, so that he may assist her in alighting.
3. "Excuse me." "Pardon me" is never good form. Use "I beg your pardon."

4. No.

Chrysler, Closed by Strike, Meets Workers Tuesday

Corporation President Keller Barred From Plant by Picket Line

75,000 ARE AFFECTED

General Motors' Strike Flareup Monday Is Brief, and Men Return

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—The United Automobile Workers of America seeking to enforce demands for exclusive bargaining rights by sit-down strikes affecting nearly 75,000 workers in the nation's automotive center, arranged a conference at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon with officials of the Chrysler corporation.

The announcement came shortly after K. T. Keller, Chrysler corporation president, attempting to enter his offices, was turned back by pickets who barricaded the main gate.

General Motors Corporation, still negotiating final terms in its costly 44-day strike ended February 11, had two new disputes on its hands at Flint, Mich. Workers quit in four plants for several hours Monday, but agreed to resume pending negotiations. About that time a new strike in Fisher Body plant No. 1 began over a demand for immediate wage increases. However, the sit-downers left that plan and were to return to work Tuesday.

The Chrysler situation developed rapidly, throwing about 50,000 workers into idleness, after corporation officials rejected the U. A. W.'s demand for recognition as sole bargaining agency for all Chrysler employees. The U. A. W., with whom Chrysler began negotiations last Wednesday, had demanded that concession as a prerequisite to further negotiations.

No Violence
Two hours after Chrysler's statement rejecting the demand was made public, union men began their strike. There was no violence and the negotiations conference continued.

Chrysler is one of the "big three" in automotive production along with General Motors and Ford. It employs about 67,000 persons, mostly in Detroit, and last year produced more than 1,000,000 autos and trucks.

Shortly before the Chrysler strike, about half of Hudson's 10,000 workers struck. Union officials charged the company with "stalling" in negotiations on wage conditions. The union said that about 1,000 men were holding the plant.

Teachers Back Up Equalizing Bill

Passage of Milum Measure Urged by Delegation Upon Governor

LITTLE ROCK.—A delegation of more than 100 P. T. A. members, teachers and school board members from Pulaski, Faulkner, Cleburne and other counties called at the governor's office Monday to urge him to use his influence to obtain passage of a Senate bill by Milum to provide that four cents of the five-cent cigarette tax be allocated to the school equalizing fund.

The bill was held up in the house last week to amend it to give that portion of the one-cent additional tax formerly allocated to a state school at Menlo to the Beebe Junior Agricultural School and to safeguard the allotment of a half-cent to the University of Arkansas building fund. The governor indicated that he would ask that the bill be put on a preferred list.

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—General Jose Miquel, directing the Spanish government's defense against a major insurgent push from the northeast, declared Tuesday that three Italian prisoners captured in the fighting had admitted they were part of "a whole Italian division" engaged in the offensive.

Miquel said the prisoners told him they landed at Cadix February 22, two days after 27 European nations, including Italy, agreed to stop the flow of volunteers to Spain.

Welfare Bill Is Given to Governor

Appropriates 3 1/2 Millions Annually for Old-Age Pensions

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The budget bill appropriating $4,124,520 annually for welfare purposes passed the house Tuesday without a dissenting vote and was sent to the governor.

The measure appropriates $3,500,000 annually for old-age pensions and other forms of relief.

Under its provisions $624,520 would go to annual maintenance of the State Welfare Department and county welfare boards.

The house voted down 30 to 42 a resolution asking Governor Bailey to veto the Harris-Bryers bridge bill and two other measures proposing reductions in taxes against motorists.

Overruling demands for a roll call, Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey declared adopted by the senate a resolution by Ellis of Bentonville commending President Roosevelt's reorganization program. A voice vote was taken, and "yeas" and "nays" were shouted lustily.

Pine Bluff Gets Locomotive Plant

Cotton Belt to Build Own Engines in Its Shops in That City

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Plans for the Cotton Belt to build its own locomotives in the shops here were announced Monday. Equipment, costing upwards of $750,000 will be installed and a large number of expert mechanics will be employed.

Parts for the locomotives have been ordered by the railroad from the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, and will be shipped here and assembled. The new locomotives will cost about $135,000 each.

It is expected the machinery will be installed within the next month and the first engine built late this summer.

Governor Bailey Is Endorsed for U. S. Judge by Senate

Only One Dissenting Vote on Resolution to Succeed Martineau

BUT MANY WANT IT

Former Governor Futrell, Chancellors Dodge, Hutchins Are Aspirants

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The senate adopted Tuesday a resolution by Senator Hal Smith of Clarendon recommending the appointment of Governor Carl Bailey to succeed the late Federal Judge John E. Martineau of the eastern Arkansas district.

Dillon of Pulaski shouted the only "no" on a voice vote, and added he "wanted that 'no' to be heard."

Millum of Harrison attempted to forestall action on the resolution. "Personally I can support this resolution because it does not affect my section of the state," he said. "But I think you are putting a lot of senators on the spot. Several members have residents of their districts who are being mentioned for this job and I don't think we should ask them to endorse someone else when their friends are affected."

Many Want Post
LITTLE ROCK.—Senator Hal P. Smith of Clarendon said Monday night that he would offer a concurrent resolution urging appointment of Governor Bailey as federal judge of the Eastern District of Arkansas.

He planned at first to introduce the resolution during Monday night's session of the senate, but at the suggestion of Senator Holloway of Lonoke it was deferred for introduction Tuesday. Holloway said that it was untimely Monday night a few hours after the funeral of Judge John E. Martineau, whose death Saturday left a vacancy on the bench.

Even before Judge Martineau's death there was speculation as to who might get the job if a vacancy occurred. It became a subject of general conversation Monday with guesses coming from all quarters.

Members of the Conway bar sent a petition to Senators Joe T. Robinson and Hattie W. Caraway for appointment of Reuben W. Robins, 53, Conway lawyer.

Former Gov. J. M. Futrell, who assumed the duties of attorney for Dyess Colony, Inc., shortly after he left the chief executive's office in January, was named as a leading possibility. So was Fred A. Isgrig, United States attorney for the Eastern District.

Two congressmen, John E. Miller of Searcy and W. J. Driver of Osceola, were listed by some amateur prognosticators. Others named as possible applicants were:

Chancellor Frank H. Dodge, Little Rock.
Chancellor A. L. Hutchins, Forrest City.

Tom C. Trimble and C. A. Walls, Lonoke lawyers.
C. W. Hendricks of Little Rock, former state senator.

Supreme Court Justice E. L. McHancy.

A message from Washington last night said both Arkansas senators had refused to discuss the question of a successor so soon after Judge Martineau's death. They were said to be expecting numerous applications.

Brookwood School Raided by Robbers

Temple Home at 315 East Third Also Entered Monday Night

Robbers Monday night broke into Brookwood Schoolhouse east Third street, and the home of Mrs. Temple, 315 East Third, carting away loot estimated by police at $25.

J. H. Sanders, roomer and insurance man at the Temple home, reported that a purse containing $18 in cash and a brief case were stolen. The brief case was found Tuesday morning near the rear of the house.

The robbery was reported to police at 2 a. m. Tuesday when a roomer at the Temple home reported hearing footsteps in the house. Entrance was gained through the front door which was left unlocked.

The Brookwood school was entered by breaking a lock on the door. A case of canned peaches and several pennies were missing. Desk drawers were ransacked.

Sales of the properties followed a recent advertisement for bids, these being the best prices offered.

Annapolis Exams at Camden 20th

2 Principals and 6 Alternates to Chose From 7th District

An examination for midshipmen appointments to Annapolis will be held at Camden at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, March 20, according to a notice given The Star by Congressman Wade Kilchens from Washington, D. C.

Preliminary physical examinations should be taken, the congressman advised; and, if desired, he will give an order for free examination by a Naval officer at Little Rock or Hot Springs. Examination by a local doctor will be at the expense of the applicant.

Applicants must not be less than 16 years old, nor more than 20. Applications must reach Congressman Kilchens by March 15, which is next Monday.

The occasion of the Camden examination is the resignation of two midshipmen at Annapolis, their appointments being charged to the Seventh Arkansas district. Two principals and six alternates are to be appointed.

Will Subpoena 8 Witnesses Named Yesterday by Star

Warrants to Be Issued Against Russell, Taylor, in Drunken Driving

WITNESSES SOUGHT

Deputy Prosecutor Explains No Information Ever Was Filed With Him

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney W. S. Atkins announced Tuesday that he had filed charges of reckless driving and driving an automobile while intoxicated against A. P. Russell of Benton and G. E. Taylor of North Little Rock, for allegedly terrorizing motorists on the Hope-Prentiss paved highway Sunday afternoon, February 28.

Mr. Atkins said warrants for the arrests of both men would be issued immediately, and that if the two men could be arrested this week they would go to trial in municipal court here next Monday.

Subpoenas for Eight
Mr. Atkins announced that subpoenas would be issued for eight witnesses The Star named in a front-page editorial Monday and "all other witnesses that can be found."

Eight witnesses named by the newspaper are: Paul Jones, Merlyn Coop, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Stonequist, John Dawson and Miss Annie Jean Walker.

Both Russell and Taylor pleaded guilty in municipal court here Monday on drunkenness charges and were fined $10 each.

No Information Filed
"At the time of filing the drunkenness charges against them I had no other information that they were drunk," Mr. Atkins said.

"At that time I didn't know whether the men were white or negro. The officers didn't tell me, nor did they say anything about reckless driving or driving on the public highways while drunk," Mr. Atkins declared.

"In defense of the officers I want to say they cannot prefer charges against anybody. Preferring charges is the duty of the city attorney if any alleged crime is committed inside the city limits."

"If a law is broken outside the city limits it is the duty of officers to file information with the deputy prosecuting or prosecutor—and then he prefers the charges. The arresting officers do not prefer charges. In the cases of Russell and Taylor there was no information as to alleged reckless driving or driving while intoxicated filed with me," Mr. Atkins concluded.

Japs Give Up Their Territorial Plans

Aside from the fact that Japan's former policy of infiltration in China has not worked out, Sato said Japan's attitude has caused unsatisfactory relations with other world powers.

Mumps Usually Affects Children, But Adults Are Not Immune

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

No. 156

When a grown-up has mumps, people somehow think the condition comical. The swelling which appears at the sides of the face in this disease usually gives the person infected a distinctly ludicrous appearance. Yet mumps really is not a laughter matter, for either a child or an adult.

Mumps usually occurs in children between 5 and 15 years of age, but may spread rapidly among older people if it appears in epidemic form in a factory, an army camp, or some similar place of assemblage. In 1918, 5755 cases of mumps occurred among 18,000 men at Camp Wheeler; in other words, about one-third of the men in the camp had the disease.

Mumps attacks girls as well as boys. One siege usually protects against future attacks of this disease, although instances are known in which people have had it two or three times.

For those who do not know what mumps really is, it is a contagious disease in which there is a swelling of the parotid glands, the salivary glands which lie just in front of the ears. Occasionally the mumps also may affect other salivary glands, such as those under the jaw and chin.

The exact cause of mumps has not yet been established, although there is good evidence that it is probably due to what is now called a filterable virus—an organism small enough to pass through the pores of a clay filter. The disease usually is spread by contact with a person who has it. Mumps is contagious from the time the first symptoms appear until perhaps a few days after the swelling has disappeared.

For safety it is customary to isolate the patient for three weeks. From the time the symptoms first appear until one week after the swelling has disappeared.

Mumps is not so contagious as chickenpox or measles, but still is sufficiently contagious to warrant some reasonably contagious protective measures when the condition appears in any school or community.

Vitamins Help City Child Make Up For Lack of Country Life

Whoever it was that discovered the virtues of cod-liver-oil, should have a monument that reaches to the sun. For fish-liver oil is the sun.

Where do these uninteresting denizens of the deep get all this health storage in their livers? From sea water. And where does sea-water get it? From the sun. Oh yes, sea water contains many, many things that benefit man.

At this time of year, the old sulphur-and-molasses time, or sassafras-tee or bonaset time, most city children do need something extra, I think.

The sun, you see, has certain virtues never absolutely defined. But one thing that we can take for granted is power. Direct sun transmits its power to people. And this is all that vitamins mean—power. Power especially to change foods and to make the most of them. It is called "vitality."

Babies Need Oil Longer

Vitamins are not foods, make no mistake. They supply the force to change foods of all kinds where they will do the most good in the body, and build up tissue.

Most babies today get cod-liver oil after the first four-to-six weeks. They get it for perhaps a year. Then the busy mother, thinking that the first fight for health and strength is over, abandons the idea with the advent of sterner foods.

But, unless baby lives in a place where he can sop up the sun the year 'round (most cities are deprived of the strong actinic rays), he should have this added vitamin content (D and A) until he is two. And thereafter also, if his doctor says he is not up to par. And many older children need it, too, when they have had little or no sun for a period of time.

Is there a difference between city children and those living out in the wide-open country? Or is it all imagination?

There is a difference, and a marked one.

Country Reflected in Health. Country children, and I have seen hundreds and hundreds this winter, have round and rosy faces. They are, generally speaking, as plump and strong as young colts. They have an enormously vital look of endurance and strength. And yet, save in occasional cases, their food through the winter has been less varied than that of the city child living within stone's-throw of fresh-vegetable stands and fresh-meat markets. Their food is good and wholesome—what could be better than the larder of a prosperous farmer?—but they naturally lack those extra tid-bits of the city child. Their only advantage is clean air, "all the sun there is," and exercise.

I put it down to sun and oxygen, this surplus health-storage.

The city mother must do the best she can to find compensations for these things. She must procure vitamins indirectly. Varieties in foods supply most of these. But the "sun" vitamins are condensed in the fish oils, and they are the most necessary, because they are the basis of functional energy.

HOLLYWOOD

Stars Have One Vacation Season—All Year!

HOLLYWOOD—It's always vacation time for somebody in the screen capital, and that doesn't include the tourists who come here on vacation. The Bar-None Ranch, a place where the place will prosper for a couple of seasons as a happy haven where cinema celebrities drop in.

Every movie player has the urge to get out of Hollywood for a rest, and quite a lot of them are successful. Stars who make only two or three, or even four, pictures a year have a good deal of leisure-time to swim in Hawaii, lose a few francs on the Riviera, or visit innumerable places closer to home.

At this writing, Gary Cooper is basking in Bermuda, George Brent is seeing the shows on Broadway and whopping it up at Leo to Edie's Errol Flynn is South America-bound and George Raft is teeing off in Florida.

Dozens are broiling at western desert resorts, and a few are following in the last snows of winter in the mountains.

Kay Francis and Marlene Dietrich recently returned from Europe. Miss Dietrich made a picture in England, but had a few months left for Paris and for Swiss ski trails.

This heavy traffic of pleasure-bent filmfites keeps them bombarded with high-pressure campaigns to lure them to this or that place. The presence of a real, live movie star at a dude ranch in Canada or a hotel in Arizona makes priceless publicity for the proprietors. If Bing Crosby runs out of gas while motoring and hikes to the Bar-None Ranch, a place where the place will prosper for a couple of seasons as a happy haven where cinema celebrities drop in.

On the Cuff

Any frugal star who enjoys free vacations enough to pose for plenty of pictures can take a wide assortment of pleasures on the cuff.

Recently the syndicate developing an American Switzerland at Sun Valley, Idaho, offered an expensive free trip to sking and tobogganing at the newly opened resort.

Two Pullman loads of actors and actresses jumped at the chance. Manufacturers of sports clothes were right on the job with complimentary outfits for some of the cuties.

For three days they had a dandy time for themselves while photographers rushed around and fell into snow banks getting trick pictures.

These pictures now are enticing cash customers by the score to the frosty playground. The ballyhoo boys followed up that stunt by persuading a working film company to come there on a location trip.

Ever since he let slip to an interviewer the fact that he'd like to visit Hawaii. Robert Taylor has been deluged with leis and ukuleles and engraved invitations to come on down and break breadfruit with the Chamber of Commerce.

He also has a grass skirt, a surfboard, and a case of pineapples, and is worried lest the expressman deliver a hula gal wrapped in cellophane one of these mornings.

A hotel in Ensenada, Mexico, just below the border, long has been a favorite week-end resort for weary movie players who find resuscitation by staying awake in distant hot spots.

The establishment has a bustling publicity staff and is jammed with tourists and fans who don't mind a pain in their hip pockets so long as they can rub elbows with the stars.

"Drop in!"

Here's Vivid Account of Irish 'Trouble'

There are enough thrills, blood-lettings, murders, shootings, narrow escapes, and general moments of hair-lifting suspense in Ernie O. Malley's new book, "Army Without Banners" (Houghton Mifflin: $3.50), to keep the most case-hardened reader up late nights.

For Mr. O. Malley writes about "the trouble" in Ireland—the revolution that began with the Easter rising in 1916 and ended with the establishment of the Irish Free State.

He writes from first-hand observation. He was in on it, almost from the start. For long years he fought the Black and Tans of England, bombed police stations, sniped from behind

News 'Leak' Stirs Commerce Bureau

New York Times Publishes Aviation Order That Was Confidential

By the Associated Press
WASHINGTON.—Daniel Roper is having "news leaks" trouble. As a news source Roper isn't very inspiring and his press conferences effuse an atmosphere of "business as usual." He never was one to cry "Wolf! Wolf!" When the recent airline catastrophes brought the public eye his way he chose to cry nothing at all in the hopes that soon he again could say "business as usual."

Scamp Bares Censure
There seemingly was a tightening of inspection about this time, however, and one of its first effects was an order upon Pennsylvania-Central airplanes to ground six of its planes until maintenance upon them was improved. To the Pennsylvania, which never had had a passenger fatality, that seemed punishing in the extreme and the wail of protest that went up resulted in an agreement that the order should not be made public.

But the whole proposition went to pot when the New York Times published the news of the grounding of the planes. Roper's department denied it emphatically for a few hours but later came out with a press release telling of the grounding of the planes. Be it noted here that Pennsylvania hedgerows, fled for his life across dark hogs, and traveled up and down the land as recruiter and organizer with a price on his head.

He was caught, at last, and jailed. Several times he was led out to be executed, only to have his life spared by some freak of chance. He was tortured with a devilish ingenuity worthy of the red Indians; and, at last, he made his escape, in an episode as thrilling as anything from the adventures of the Scarlet Pimpernel.

But Mr. O. Malley's book is more than a mere record of bloodshed and excitement. It enables you to understand, emotionally as well as intellectually, why the Irish people revolted.

Not even in 1776 did England blunder more profoundly in handling an uprising. Mr. O. Malley remarks that the Easter outbreak in 1916 was supported by only a fraction of the Irish populace. Not until the stupid cruelty of the British reprisals had aroused flaming indignation all across Ireland did there develop the popular rising that the Black and Tans were unable to quell.

Central put new planes into service and revised its maintenance schedules to regain departmental approval.

But for days Roper has his scents scurrying about the bewildering maze of this most cordoned public building smelling at every suspicious news outlet.

Inward Seething

The amazing thing is that comparatively little has leaked out of the aeronautics bureau of the commerce department, for evidence of inward seething has crept repeatedly into various senate aviation investigations.

Blistering accusations have rocketed back and forth, the heat of which, if not the light, cannot be forever walled in.

Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport association of America, which is the airlines' own agency, recently asserted that slack maintenance of aviation beams and similar aids was the cause of the disasters while the bureau laid them more to pilots' errors.

One good source had it that the department was so disturbed at Gor-rell's complaint that pressure is being laid upon the airlines to be rid of him.

Meets Father at Age 32

SHAWNEE, Okla.—(AP)—Thirty-two-year-old Ray Webb, a civil engineer, saw his father for the first time in his life recently.

And the father, Hugh Webb of Knox City, Tex., got acquainted not only with his son, but with his grandson, four-year-old Stanley Dean Webb.

Ray Webb was a baby when his mother and father were divorced thirty-two years ago. His mother, Mrs. Emma Cannon, raised her son at Tulsa. The elder Webb moved from Whitesboro, Texas, the family home, to Knox City.

Father and son struck up a correspondence after locating each other in 1930. The two finally met, looked at each other and laughed. They look remarkably alike.

Margot Grahame agrees that Luckies are gentlest on the throat

"I've smoked Luckies for eight years—ever since I was introduced to them in London by an American motion picture producer. He put forward the very sensible argument that they are the gentlest cigarette in the world on the throat—and fine tobacco, too. Since then I have made many pictures, and I must say Luckies have always been considerate of my throat. In fact, my throat practically insists that I choose a light smoke—which is easy to understand in view of the voice strain picture-work entails."

Miss Grahame verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. County Debt Body to Meet on 18th

Conciliation Group Will Consider Farm Debt Adjustments

E. M. Osborn, chairman of the Hempstead county Farm Debt Adjustment Committee, announced Tuesday that a regular meeting of the committee will be held at the Resettlement office in Hope at 10 a. m. Thursday, March 18.

The committee functions as a conciliatory body to assist worthy, debt-burdened farmers in working out new agreements with their creditors to avoid foreclosure or bankruptcy. There is no charge for its services.

By applying sound and impartial business reasoning, the committee is often successful in solving difficult farm debt problems, thus eliminating the expense and delay of liquidation and improving the status of both debtor and creditor.

The committee is composed of citizens appointed by the governor and serves without pay except for "out of pocket" expenses. The work is coordinated by the Farm Debt Adjustment Unit of the Resettlement Administration.

Further information concerning the services of the committee may be secured by contacting the chairman, the extension agent or the RA rehabilitation supervisor.

Removes Stumps, Corrects Terrace

Roy Rogers, of Shover Springs, Battles Successfully With Erosion

Roy Rogers, a co-operator with the Soil Conservation Service, who lives at Shover Springs, has been farming some land which was recently cleared. Although the field is new ground, it was washed badly and needed to be terraced. But there were so many stumps on the land that it could not be terraced economically in its present condition.

Mr. Rogers has solved his problem by blasting the stumps with dynamite. Employing the cap-and-fuse method has made it necessary to use on an average of from four to six sticks of dynamite to blast the stumps out.

This is a long step in the direction of applying a sound land use and soil conservation program on his farm. The field can now be terraced and the rows laid off with the tractor. Mr. Rogers' example may easily be followed by other farmers in this county who are having similar difficulties.

Since long before the Japanese army aided Manchoukuo in setting up its state in 1931, independent of the regime of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, Japanese have discussed the desire of expanding their domination of North China.

At the close of the speech he asked that the county fair be revived to stimulate more interest in the growing of better farm products and livestock. Joe Floyd, charter member and former holder of several offices of the club, was presented a pen and pencil set in a farewell address by John P. Cox. Mr. Floyd leaves soon for Camden where he will be connected with the district WPA office staff.

The club voted to attend an inter-city meeting with the Hot Springs club at Hot Springs March 24. Guests Tuesday other than Mr. Rider and Mr. Huskey were Frank J. Hill and Leonard Ellis.

FOR "A SOPHISTICATED LADY"

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

by MARIE BLIZARD © 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DAPHNE BRETT, charming young New York executive, rents her deceased father's Connecticut estate to LARRY SMITH, attractive young bachelor architect, and promptly likes him tremendously. Daphne has one sister, JENNIFER, six years younger, just out of college and at her first job.

One night Larry dates Daphne. At the same time she refuses Daphne's permission to date in the Ainsley set. Daphne spends a thrilling evening with Larry, only to come home and find Jennifer gone.

At dawn Jennifer returns, found, slightly incriminated. Daphne is shocked, pained. Later Jennifer demands a showdown to lead her own life. The sisters conciliate, but Jennifer is scheming. One day she suggests that Jennifer make a good husband. Jennifer wants a rich husband—if not Larry, then Tuck.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XII
"Tuck, please," Jennifer begged gently at Tuck Ainsley's elbow. She snuggled to him in the low-slung roadster. "Please be my lamb and stop here. Do you want to start something at this stage of the game?"

He reached for the gear and pulled it back. "Young lady, are you trying to kid me? This is schoolgirl stuff, stopping the car a block from your apartment. I won't have it. You're a strange mixture of a sophisticated woman and a child. I can't dope you out."

"Just make up your mind that I'm a jenny fiddle, or was," she said, lowering her voice and brushing his cheek with hers, "until I met you."

JENNIFER took off her hat and laid her head back against the cushion, staring up at the stars. She took a deep breath. "This is a night for adventure, darling. Aren't you glad to see me? Put me top down on the car? An April night and an April moon! There'll be so many others and we shall be together. It makes me sad. I've never known anyone like you, Tuck, and I feel someone just to think that some day I'll lose you. You'll share his same moon with someone else."

He drew her close to him. Her little figure fitted smoothly into his arms, her soft hair brushed his cheek, the perfume of her mingled with the soft scent of the night air.

"I may," he said, "but why shouldn't we see it again and again together?"

For an instant her eyes opened and looked over his shoulder into the future. She smiled at herself in the darkness.

He had said it, she said to herself and slipped gently out of his embrace.

"Tomorrow at four at Grace's," she said aloud, and kissed the tips of his fingers gently. Then she ran out of his sight. She was breathless when she ran up the steps and let herself into the hall of the apartment house. Then, she stopped, freshened her lips, smoothed her hair. She glanced anxiously at her wrist-watch. It was 1:30 and she'd have some tall explaining to do if Daphne was at home.

Daphne was at home. Daphne, still in her cherry-colored taffeta evening frock, was lying on the lounge with her arms raised and her hands under her head, contemplating the ceiling as though some lovely line were written there.

Jennifer paused uncertainly in the door-way and stalled for an opening line.

"I thought you were never coming home," Daphne said quite unexpectedly. "Your bridge lasted late at Helen's. Oh, Jennifer, what do you think?"

Jennifer sighed with relief and said she didn't think. She knew from the stars in Daphne's eyes, from the flush that laid pink petals on her cheeks, that her role was to listen—a role for which she was grateful.

ONE silver-sandaled foot swung beside the sofa. The other twisted back and forth and held Daphne's gaze. "I may be wrong but I think Larry is in love with me."

"Dope!" Jennifer retorted. "I could have told you that a long time ago. What happened?"

"Happened? Nothing, except that he spent most of the evening starting to say something, clearing his throat and hanging onto my hand. Then he dashed off to get his train and said he was going to call me when he got home. Oh, Jennifer, you don't suppose he was trying to tell me bad news, do you?"

"Do you mean he's going to call you tonight?"

"That's what he said. I'm waiting for his call now. Oh, dear, I'm frightened."

Jennifer stifled a yawn. "Well, if you don't mind standing the watch alone, I think I'll run along to bed. Standing all day long on my poor feet is no easy job and Mandi-baum bawled me out for being late this morning. Being a model is no soft job like yours."

Daphne would have sighed wearily had she been listening to Jennifer. She would have recognized the old signs. Jennifer was getting bored with her job modeling. After only one month.

Her thoughts swung back to Larry and the new apprehension that had suddenly sprung to her mind.

THE telephone rang imperiously. Daphne tripped over her skirts in her eagerness to reach it, gathered them up and fell across her bed to clutch the telephone and remove it from its cradle.

"Hello," she said anxiously and felt her heart beating against her ribs.

"Daphne," it was Larry—"did you know what I was trying to tell you tonight?"

Daphne said that she didn't. "But don't be frightened, darling. No matter what it is, I want to hear it."

"Is it any surprise to you to know that I love you?"

Daphne made one of those little inarticulate sounds in her throat. "I haven't told you that I did," Daphne waited while time stood still.

"I do, Daphne, and I want you to marry me. That was what I was trying to say. I'm going to ask you tomorrow night."

"Oh, Larry! . . . Good night, darling . . . until tomorrow."

When Jennifer, half an hour later, came back from the bath she found Daphne still motionless with her hands over her eyes.

"Was it bad news?" she asked, turning down her bed.

"No," Daphne answered as though in a trance. "It was the most wonderful news I've ever heard."

But she didn't tell Jennifer what it was. Or how bitter sweet, because she knew she couldn't tell Larry she would marry him. It wouldn't be fair to him to ask him to wait the long, long time that stretched before her before she would be free.

She fell asleep with her happiness knowing that the morrow was to be hers.

Willard Is Busy With Real Estate

Jess Wants to Open Up Restaurant—Says Louis Can't Take It

This is second of series on former sports stars.

By RICHARD McCANN
NEA Service Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The boys are saying that Jess Willard has just lost another round in his battle with life. It seems that Jess, who has had more ups and downs than an elevator boy since he knocked the world's heavyweight crown off the shiny black billiard-ball dome of Jack Johnson, opened up a cafe here a while ago, no longer owns any interest in it.

The boys, jumping to conclusions, say that poor old Jess is taking another beating.

But, Jess, still as jolly as old King Cole despite his numerous reverses, refuses to whimper out an admission that this last venture was a set-back. "I just haven't been able to find a location that would be entirely satisfactory," says Jess. Talking like that he sort of reminds you of the beaten battler who curses the judges as he murses his wounds.

Jess was asked, rather brutally point-blank, if he were broke. The former heavyweight champion ducked and weaved and sparred with the question.

"Who can tell?" he jabbed back. "Who can tell? I've got a lot of investments in scattered real estate and, of course, they have depreciated (yes, depreciated—that's the word big Jess used) in value far beyond what anybody thought they would or could—so how can I tell how I'm standing financially?"

The $300,000 Is Gone
However, there's no doubt that Jess doesn't have that $300,000 he reaped for himself, his managers and others as a fighter, circus performer and vaudeville entertainer.

That money has gone the way of all cash. He poured some of the gold into an empty oil well, he scattered some of it around on weedy real estate in California and then he used the skimpy remainder to build a grocery market in Los Angeles. He wound up a few months later making $15 per week as a floor man in the place.

Now, after several flyers, he's back to earth, so to speak. He's back in the real estate business and he would have you to know that he's doing all right.

"I've got a lot of real estate investments here in Western Pennsylvania," says Jess. "I devote all my time to looking after them. I would like to do some referee work—rassling matches and fights—but I just don't have any time."

Although he has no direct connections with the fight game, Jess is still very much interested in it. In fact, some of the old-timers will say that his interest now is greater than it was when he was a fighter. Jess was too genial, they say, to be a really great fighter. He never seemed to understand why he was supposed to hit the other fellow and why the other fellow was trying to hit him—he wasn't mad at anybody and he couldn't understand why anybody was mad enough at him to want to hit him.

Jess doesn't pay any attention to those fellows who sneer at his victory over Jack Johnson. So many, you know, say that Johnson took a dive. "They're crazy," says Jess. "I really beat him that day. . . . Geez, what a thrill that was," and the big fellow's face lights up as his mind brings back the picture of Johnson, laying out on the canvas, steaming in the Havana heat wave. "Gosh, but it was hot that day—115 in the shade and no shade. There was 30 prostrations among the spectators. And there was me and Johnson, fighting in that furnace for an hour and 44 minutes!"

Louis Can't Take It
Despite the fact that he gets sort of a cold shoulder from the boxing boys today, the big fellow likes the game, and would go through it all over again.

"It was a swell experience for me—it helped me make a lot of friends all over the country."

Jess doesn't think much of the fighters of today. "Johnson in his prime could've whipped the lot of 'em," says Jess. "He was a finished boxer. Joe Louis is pretty good, but Schmeling proved that Louis couldn't take a punch on the chin. Jimmy Braddock's pretty good, too, but he's an old man and maybe he can't take it, either. Schmeling's really the best of the bunch. Looks to me like he'd win the championship if they'd give him a chance."

Jess is still hale and hearty at 53. His hair is graying, but "I still got as much as I ever had." He isn't much heavier than he was when he was punned to a pulp by that wild man Dempsey. "I weigh about 270," says Jess, patting his tummy, and I ain't so soft, either."

Jess is married and has five children, three daughters and two sons. Jess, Jr., the youngest, is a student at Washington State, where he plays football and does some boxing.

"He's a big fellow," says Papa Jess, proudly. "He's six feet one-and-a-half and must weigh about 210. They say he can box right smart, too."

Firpo Easiest for Dempsey

DETROIT, Mich.—(NEA)—Jack Kearns gets mad when critics sneer at his new young heavyweight, Roscoe Toles, and ask, "Who'd he ever lick?"

"That's what they said about Jack Dempsey, too," says Kearns. "They said Carl Morris and Gunboat Smith and Fred Fulton and all the other men he knocked out when he was coming along were bums. Then when he whipped Willard they said Jess never could fight."

"When he bowled over Georges Carpentier, they said the Frenchman was nothing but an over-stuffed middleweight. It wasn't until he knocked out Louis Firpo that Dempsey was given any credit. Firpo was a big, fierce-looking fellow and he captured the fans' imagination. They thought he was a killer. So when Dempsey knocked him out, Jack became the greatest fighter of all time."

"And here's the funny part about it all. Firpo was the biggest bum of them all. He was big and tough, but he didn't know a thing about fighting. I could've licked him."

Won, Lost Total Ranks Dean No. 4

Grove, Gomez, Hubbell All Beat Dizzy's 5-Year Record

By ALLAN GOULD
Copyright, 1937, AP Feature Service
NEW YORK—(AP)—Jerome Herman Dean points with precocious pride to his 5-year record of 120 victories, as against 65 defeats, in demanding about twice the salary ever paid a big league pitcher, past or present.

Baseball experts not only feel certain the dizzy right-hander of the St. Louis Cardinals will settle for much less than the $50,000 he has been shouting for, but point out that Dean still has a long way to go before touching the best pitching performances on record.

The succulent statistics reveal that three southpaw contemporaries, Bob Grove, Lefty Gomez and Carl Hubbell, all rank ahead of Dean on percentage, at least, in a compilation of the best consecutive 5-year pitching records.

Grove, the highest paid finger in the American league, stands at the head of the 5-year class with the amazingly high percentage of .735 for his record of 128 victories and only 33 defeats in 1923-33 with the Philadelphia A's.

This excels over the marvelous performances of Mordecai (Three-fingered) Brown, Christy Mathewson, Grover Alexander, Walter Johnson, and Cy Young, whose flinging fents otherwise overshadow those of the post-war pitching group.

Twelve Ahead of Dean
All told, in the tabulation of Who's Who among pitching greats, Dean tails an even dozen performers, on percentage.

Our research is confined to toilers of the twentieth century, except that for purposes of comparison with older times, Cy Young's greatest 5-year streak, during which he compiled 169 victories from 1892 to 1896, is included Young then twirled for the Cleveland Nationals. With the Boston Red Sox after the turn of the century he had another 5-year run of 135 triumphs.

No pitcher has averaged 30 victories per season in so-called modern major league history, but up to the time of the World war that was the mark the big shots aimed at Johnson came closest, with a total of 148 triumphs during 1912-16, with a club that was pennantless. Mathewson, with a stronger outfit, aggregated 147 for his best 5-year stretch.

Grove and Brown, with the best 5-year records of the post-war and pre-war eras, enjoyed powerful support. The Athletics won three pennants, the Chicago Cubs four, during their best years.

Then There Were Others
The 5-year list, of course, does not take into account a number of exceptional performances. Smokey Joe Wood, for instance, compiled the remarkable record of 34 victories against only five setbacks in 1912 with the Red Sox, but he tapered off so rapidly that his 5-year total reached only 91 wins. Rube Marquard had a brilliant 3-year stretch with the Giants, accumulating 73 triumphs from 1911 to 1913, but then skidded. Chief Bender of the Athletics, a wonderful "spot" pitcher, registered over 20 victories in only one season, 1910.

Grove, Dean and Sergeant Jim Bagby, former Cleveland right-hander, are the only pitchers since the war to register as many as 30 victories a season. Bagby collected 31 in 1920. Grove the same in 1931, and Dean 30 in 1934.

ROSEMONT SHOULD BE NOSEMONT

It's a good thing for the backers of Rosemont that the camera which snapped this picture wasn't the one the judges used in their photo finish decision. Here it looks like Rosemont had finished second, behind Seabiscuit, in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap Feb. 27. But it was a close, driving finish and the angle from which this picture was taken fails to show that Rosemont won by a nose. The winner paid the sizable sum of $9.80. Seabiscuit paid $6.80 for second place and Indian Broom returned $5.80 for every $2 wager.

Earl Sande Trains Winners But Longs to Get Back in the Saddle

During His Career His Mounts Have Won Near $3,000,000—Tells of Biggest Racing Thrill at Belmont Park

By ORLO ROBERTSON
AP Staff Writer

Earle Sande, the handy guy, is making his mark as a trainer, but he still dreams of the days when he hand-rode many of America's greatest horses to victory.

"Yes, I get quite a thrill out of saddle-dancing winners," said the earl of Hialeah park. "But that thrill is nothing like the one I got out of riding. Those cheers ringing in my ears were sweet music."

Of nearly 1,000 triumphs in 14 years in the saddle, including three Kentucky Derby victories, the thrill that remains freshest in Sande's mind came when he rode Gallant Fox to a nose victory over Questionaire in the 1930 Lawrence Realization at Belmont park.

That was one of the bitterest stretch duels horse followers ever witnessed. Sonny Workman, the turf's foremost whip rider, was up on Questionaire, and Sande used all his guile to hinder the Fox to victory. The two hooked up in a duel an eighth of a mile from home but the Fox, with his nose in front, stubbornly refused to give an inch.

Despite the gentleness of Gallant Fox, Sande rates Man O' War the best horse he ever rode. He was up on "Old Red" only once, in the Kenner Stakes at Saratoga, but that was enough to convince the handy guy that Man O' War was all that had been said about him.

The earl, now 38 years old, left the "bush" tracks of Idaho and the Far West in the winter of 1917 to make a name for himself. He rode his first winner on the big time at the Fair Grounds, New Orleans, January 21, 1918. From then on his success was phenomenal. His first year was his best on the basis of winners as he scored with 153 of his 707 mounts.

Sande's contract was bought by Guy Bedwell for J. K. L. Ross, the Canadian turfman, and the earl's ability, figured in the victories of that great stable, which included such equine stars as Sir Barton, Cudgel, Billy Kelly, Boniface and Milk Maid.

When Sande severed his connections with Ross after the famous Man O' War-Sir Barton race at Kenilworth, he signed up with Sam Hildreth, who was then training for Harry F. Sinclair's Hancocks stable.

Wins $3,000,000
It was with Hildreth he won his richest purses. In 1923 he rode Zev to more than a quarter of a million dollars' worth of purses, including the Kentucky Derby, Belmont Stakes, Lawrence Realization, the International Special and the match race with In Memoriam. Altogether he accounted for 39 stakes during the year.

That was tops until he staged one of his frequent comebacks in 1930 and won more than $200,000 with Gallant Fox. The earl had a difficult time keeping his weight down and retired again. He came back to give the sport another fling two years later but again found weight his bugaboo.

During his riding career, Sande's mounts amassed the record total of close to $3,000,000. Luck was against him as an owner, however. He paid $25,000 for the promising Nassak on

Nine Varsity and Seven Freshmen Receive Numerals

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—The University of Arkansas athletic council awarded nine varsity and seven freshman basketball letters for 1937 Monday.

Two varsity players received reserve letters. Edwin Griffith, senior forward, was given a gold basketball in recognition of three years as a varsity player.

Receiving varsity awards were Captain Bobby Martin, Gilliland, Frank Brodie, Jim Bouton, Don Lockard, Jack Robbins, Ray Hamilton, Harold Brady and Henry Tuck.

Freshmen letters went to Wilfred Thorpe, O. L. Curtis, Kay Eakins, Leslie Hagood, Vernon Hall, O. W. Morrow and J. W. Southerland.

Freemont Goza and Neil Martin were given varsity reserve letters. Lockard, leading Southwest conference scorer, won the trophy for the best free throw average among the Razorbacks. His season's average was 62.4.

"Bowl" Grid Ban Brings Protest

Action in Southeastern Conference Viewed as Discrimination

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP)—The official ban placed on "bowl" football games, except those sponsored in Pasadena and New Orleans stirred widespread controversy Monday, including charges the Southeastern conference had discriminated against other cities.

Reaction to the conference's move in forbidding its team to play post season games controlled partially or wholly by "third parties," aside from the Sugar and Rose Bowl contests, was mixed but for the most part had little approval.

Charges of discrimination were made in Florida, where the city of Miami sponsors the Orange bowl and Georgia, where Atlanta officials made known a movement was under way to present a game next New Year's day.

Boston, Philadelphia to Get Running Start National League Race

BOSTON—(NEA)—The Boston Bees and Philadelphia Phillies will get off to a running start in the National League race this season.

They will play a double header on opening day because baseball's big day is also Patriots' Day, a legal holiday in Boston. One game will be played in the morning and the second in the afternoon.

The mayor hasn't decided to get up for the morning game and so the first ball-throwing-out ceremonies may wait until afternoon.

Loss in Worn Coins

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Wear and tear on metal money represents a loss of more than $700,000 a year.

The government stands the loss. Appropriations are made each year for the difference between the face value of worn coins returned and the amount such coins produce in new coins after they have been melted down and re-coined.

A five-year average shows a loss of $28,000, or 5 per cent, on cents and nickels, and $678,303, or 8.7 per cent, on dimes, quarters, halves and dollars. Worn out coin is spoken of as "uncurrent coin." It averages about $10,000,000 a year in face value.

American's Villa Used by Italians

Property of Former Dorothy Taylor Near Rome Is Under Lease

By ANDRUE BERDING
Associated Press Correspondent
ROME—(AP)—An American woman's villa here has been taken over by the government to house distinguished political visitors.
General Hermann Goering, Germany's No. 2 man, was the first to inhabit it under its new auspices when he was here recently.
It is the beautiful 16th century Villa Madama owned by Count and Countess Dentice di Frasso. She was formerly Dorothy Taylor, daughter of a millionaire New York broker, and is now in Hollywood.
It is understood her money went to buy the villa in 1926 and to restore it in 1928. Mussolini's government has it on a two-year lease.
Outside of several caretakers it is uninhabited except when an outstanding political personage comes for talks with Il Duce and Ciano.
It was built by Giulio Romano from plans by the celebrated Raphael in 1516-1527 for Cardinal Giulio de Medici, afterwards Pope Clement VII. Its name stems from the fact that in 1458 it came into the possession of "Madama" Margareta, daughter of Emperor Charles V.

There are 48,208,310 pieces of the old large size currency still in circulation.

Niagara's Glittering Wilderness

Ice, a million tons in a million blocks of a million shapes and sizes, piled 60 feet high at the foot of Niagara Falls. The picture above gives a fair idea of the magnitude of the ice movement, which, rivermen say, was the greatest since 1908 and which threatened steamers in winter docks. The crystal cliffs rose 300 feet high along the sides of this gorge. An idea of the magnitude of the churning pit in the foreground can be gained from the ladder embedded in the ice beside it.

Murray Is Chief Helper to Lewis

Quiet-Spoken Man
Strange Contrast to
C. I. O.'s Main Leader

By JAMES A. BAUBIE
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH—(AP)—A tall, lean youth fresh from Scotland lost his temper one day in 1904 and knocked down the checkweighman at a coal mine in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania.

The miners' strike that followed was ended by hunger four weeks later and young Philip Murray was railroaded out of town.

When he got off the train at Pittsburgh, he had determined on his career as a labor leader.

Like a School Teacher
That career has made him ace organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization—it was Murray who was able to announce union recognition by the giant Carnegie-Illinois Steel company. And ahead lie such huge objectives as the coal miners' wage conference and the organization of the nation's industrial workers.

His ambition, he says, is to see every worker in mass production industry organized into industrial unions; that is, one big union for all workers of each industry.

He has approached his task by methods directly opposite from those of his chief, John L. Lewis.

Lewis charges at capital belligerently, Murray, resembling a quiet gray-haired school teacher, prevails with

'Deliquidating' Flood Currency

Squeezing the water out of flood-soaked bills was just so much dry routine to L. S. Monroe, money department manager, shown above as he ran through an ordinary laundry mangle some of the Louisville Federal Reserve Bank's currency of various denominations. The bills were soaked by the high waters of the Ohio river which recently covered most of the city.

calm logic.

Took Correspondence Course
Born in Lanarkshire, Scotland, he recalls the day in his sixth year that his father came home from the mine and announced a strike had been settled. The men had been granted a 12 cents a day increase, which brought their daily wage to $1.65.

Ten years later William Francis

Murray brought his family of 10 children to America, to begin a new life in a coal mining community near Irwin, Pa.

While young Phil worked in the mines, he took a correspondence course, cramming his head with mathematics, economics, mining, grammar and labor relations.

Then came the fight.
Murray talks about these things in careful English, his soft voice made richer by a Scottish burr.

Escapes Workers' Wrath
He started work again in Broughton and within a year was elected president of the United Mine Workers local union in Washington county.

In 1912 he was elected a member of the union's international executive board and turned down an offer of $5,000 a year to become assistant manager of a coal company.

While thus definitely casting his lot with organized labor, he managed to escape the condemnation of the miners when his efforts on their part ended disastrously. He explains it this way: "Maybe it's because I don't push so hard. If the union men want to know why I have acted in a certain way, I just tell them what it was possible to do and what it was impossible to do. Then they can make up their own minds about me."

Summoned By Presidents
Lewis has not escaped the workers' enmity so successfully.

Loyal to Lewis, Murray has won the UMWA president's confidence increasingly since his own election in 1929 as vice president of the international union.

Murray's activity has not been confined to his union. President Wilson summoned him to Washington as a member of the national coal production committee in 1917-1918, when he also served on the national war labor board.

President Harding asked him to intercede in 1921 when West Virginia was embattled over a coal dispute. He invited representatives of opposing sides to meet across his desk and a few hours later left the meeting with a peace settlement.

Declined Pay Raise
Murray also assisted in the preparation of the original Davis-Kelly coal bill in 1930 (for regulation of the bituminous coal industry) and in the NRA legislation and Guffey-Snyder coal bill of 1934.

He has been on the Pittsburgh board of education continuously since

"Dictator" Isn't Pleasant to F. D.

President Asks Press Not to Refer to Any Bills as "Must"

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The President is getting sensitive about this "dictator" business.

About two years back, near the close of a session, President Roosevelt let congress know that he wanted certain measures passed before the windup. Immediately the list was called the "must" legislation. The term has been attached since to nearly every piece of legislation the White House has advocated.

Evidently determined to avoid even the appearance of dictating, President Roosevelt asked reporters at a recent press conference to stop using the term 1919. He lives quietly with his wife and the son in a comfortable middle class home in Pittsburgh's south hills section.

He works because he likes his job and turned down the mine union's recent vote to double his $9,000 yearly salary.

"must" and substitute "ought."

Another phase of the President's relations with the press came up at the same conference. "The New York Times" recently published a story by Arthur Krock, its Washington bureau chief, in which the President was quoted as telling friends:

"When I retire to private life on January 20, 1941, I do not want to leave the country in the condition Buchanan left it to Lincoln. If I cannot, in the brief time given to me to attack its deep and disturbing problems, solve these problems, I hope at least to have moved them well on the way to solution by my successor. It is absolutely essential that the solving process begin at once."

Then followed a discussion of the President's political philosophy.

It was a scoop that left White House correspondents wondering whether the President was to play favorites henceforth.

At the next press conference, J. Fred Essary, of "The Baltimore Sun," read a recital of the case but was interrupted by the President, with a smiling plea of "Now, Fred—Essary insisted on asking if such a press policy might continue.

The President apologized handsomely, asking however, that the terms of the apology be "off the record."

It struck us as amusing when Sir Wilfrid Lewis, "London Times" correspondent, remarked across a table that he had to be getting on home as next day he had to write a lengthy piece on the United States constitutional crisis. Only a few weeks ago American correspondents in London were writing long dispatches on a British constitutional crisis—arising under far different circumstances.

Check Bird Migrants

MARGUETTE, Mich.—(AP)—Michigan, Wisconsin and several other north central states plan to keep a check on migratory habits of grouse by giving them colored tail feathers.

In Michigan green, pink and white feathers will be inserted in the tails of birds caught by live trapping. The different colors will designate the district from which the birds originate. Hunters are expected to report to authorities the colors carried by birds shot or seen.

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pain, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.
Dr. H. L. French, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces heartburn, indigestion, gives your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation."
